New Chapter in Relations Urged

Brezhnev and Schmidt Hold Talks

MOSCOW, Oct. 28 (AP).-Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev told Chancellor Helmut Schmidt tonight they must open new chapter in Soviet-West German relations and said the task requires strength, persistence and "political courage."

Mr. Brezhnev's wide-ranging speech at a dinner for the Chancellor, who arrived here for four days of talks, contained an attack on Mr. Schmidt's political opposition, a reassurance for East Germany and a demand that the four-power agreement on Berlin be strictly observed.

His remark about "political courage" could be taken as a reference to his own determinato carry through detente. policies in the face of some Kremin opposition. Or he could en referring backs . Mr. Schmidt's Social Democrats suffered in two local elections yesterday.

"Opening a new chapter in the mutual relations of our states and giving it a new positive meaning also calls for much strength, persistence and, I would say, political courage," Mr. Brezhnev said. The implication was that such courage was needed on both sides.

Airport Greeting Mr. Brezhnev underlined the importance that he attaches to the Schmidt visit by going to the airport to greet the Chancellor, a gesture not demanded by protocol. He then escorted Mr. Schmidt to a government residence. They talked privately for 30 minutes and then opened formal discussions. In his dinner speech, Mr. Schmidt talked of expanding relations, "interlacing our economic interests" and overcoming the division of Europe through cooperation. He said Bonn was working for strict application of the agreement on Berlin which still is an irritant to Soviet-West German relations. Mr. Brezhnev said, "Strict observance of the [four-power] agreement, this is what is needed so that the West Berlin issue should no longer cloud the political atmosphere in the center of Europe."

In what was seen as reassurance to East Germany, Mr. Brezhnev said it was "quite obvious that improvement of relations between the U.S.S.R. and the F.R.G. [Federal Republic of Germany] is not detrimental to anyone. More-countries benefit by it, it is deeply consonant with the processes of détente under way in Europe and outside it."

Mr. Brezhney said the Soviet Union "duly appreciated" the determination of the Schmidt government to follow the political course set by former Chancellor over, not only the peoples of our (Continued on Page 2, Col. 1)

Kissinger Urges India to Join Bid to Control Atomic Exports

By Bernard Gwertzman

-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger called upon India tenight as the newest member of the nuclear club to join the United States and other nations to an mternational effort to prevent states from receiving nuclear technology that they could use to make atomic weapons. In a major speech on Indian-American relations, Mr. Kissinger also urged India, in a measure related to the world food crisis to support efforts to drive down the price of oil. He reminded his Indian audience that 'higher oil prices directly affect food prices by increasing the costs of fertilizer, of operating agricultural machinery, and of transporting food to deficit areas." Although Mr. Kissinger's address to the Indian Council of World Affairs included such sensitive issues as India's nuclear capability and the link between food and energy, it was ossically conciliatory, and capped a busy day in which both Indian and U.S. officials sought to underscore a gradual improvement of relations since the severe strains of 1971, when the United States supported Pakistan in its losing war with India.

Farlier, Mr. Kissinger and Foreign Minister Yeshwantrad Chavan signed an agreement to establish a U.S.-Indian commission for economic, commercial, scientific, technological, educational and cultural cooperation.

The accord, long planned for Mr. Kissinger's visit, was meant by both nations to dramatize their decision to chart a new course in relations, Mr. Chavan called it "an important sandmark" and "a concrete expres-

ROCHESTER, N.Y. Oct. 28 (NYT).—Many of the country's leading experts on slavery met here last week to confront a of economists who have invaded their territory with computers and formulas to suggest that blacks thrived under slevery in

The two scholars, Robert Pogel and Stanley Engerman of the University of Rochester, are the authors of "Time on the Cross." an iconoclastic book that purports to undermine many assumptions about the horrors of slavery, not to justify it but to shed new light on what they see as the richness and integrity of black culture

The notion has provoked such scholarly and even public debate that 100 or so prominent his-torians, economists and sociologists gathered here at the university to debate its implications. They traded arguments and even bitter accusations in a three-day discussion on a study that many feel is likely to force some fundamental rethinking of modern American history and redirect the

On the contrary, they say, slavery succeeded economically because the slaves developed a high level of skill, worked at least as hard as free farmers are well. maintained stable family lives and even prudish sexual mores and were whimsed only enough to maintain production, not excessiyely or out of sheer cruelty. The implication is that the history.

On this basis the authors dispute the notion that slavery left ly, so often cited as the cause blacks crippled intellectually and of black troubles today, occurred in the post-Civil War period, possibly during the Decression of the 1930s, and that therefore the hlame for the race situation cannot be consigned to a small, longgone Southern aristocracy.

The effect of their work, say Mr. Fogel and Mr. Engerman is to dispel the "myth" of black incompetence and "recover" black

Others, however, have gotten another message. The authors have been bitterly accused of using cold statistics and averages to paper over a harsh and degrading reality that must be under-stood in psychological and social ments to justify slavery.

"Neither the cause of black Americans nor the search for reality has gained much from their transformation of the slaves from a childlike Sambo into a willing collaborator, a successoriented Calvinist who internalized the values of the master class," said Prof. Kenneth Stampp, historian from the University of California at Berkeley who is a leading authority on slavery. His previous works on the harshness of that system were attacked in Time on the Cross. "They deny the slave his voice his initiative and his humanity; they reject the imidy world in which masters and slaves, with their rational and irrational perceptions, survived as best they could, and replace it with a model of a tidy, rational world that never was," Prof. Stampp said. Mr. Fogel and Mr. Engerman had to defend themselves not only from the historians but also from their fellow "cliometricians"

News Analysis

Despite Moves by Bishops, It Was the Pope's Synod

By Israel Shenker

ROME, Oct. 28 (NYT).—Vatican Council II the great assembly of all Catholic bishops, convened in 1962 by Pope John XXIII and concluded in 1965 under Pope Paul VI, enshrined the principle of collegiality. It proclaimed that the bishops, together with the Roman Pontiff, have "supreme and full power over the universal church."

Reviving an ancient instrument, Pope Paul then convoked a Synod of Bishops, which first met here in 1967. The fourth synod, which began Sept. 27 and ended Saturday, was in many ways like its predecessors-the agenda was set by the Pope, bishops were not given the right to decide anything on their own, and any conclusions were regarded as only advice to the Pope.

This was less than collegiality, and the 200 bishops and other church notables most of them elected by their colleagues-had found that out quickly. The bishops wanted to discuss the family, but the Pope decided instead that the theme would be "Evangelization in the Modern World." Refusing to interpret that subject narrowly, bishops turned a concern for Scripture into a critique of social, political and economic repression and of their own hierarchical structures. Bishops from Africa pleaded for "indigenization," adapting Roman Catholic worship to local culture. Latin American bishops spoke about "conscientization," participating in the struggle for social, economic and political

In an atmosphere heavy with disappointment and suspicion, bishops clamored to know who was responsible for the betrayal of their wishes. The commission whose joh it had been to draw up the conclusions had abdicated its responsibility and left the job to two theologians and then finally to two cardinals.

But only four days remained. There was not enough time to draw up the kind of text the bishops wanted, so they com-promised and agreed to let two working groups draft a general message and a simple list of principal concerns expressed at the synod.

The Vernacular

"These things have to surface." said the Most Rev. Angelo Fernandes, archbishop of New Delhi. Other prelates joined in welcoming the sudden emergence of a repressed consensus in fevor not of caution but of enterprise. As though on signal, the synod signified its liberation by abandoning Latin to a tiny minority and expressing itself in the ver-

Gordon Joseph Cardinal Gray, archbishop of St. Andrews and Edinburgh, hailed the turn, explaining that he had felt inhibited because his Latin was bad, The Most Rev. Joschim Rubuna bishop of Ruyigi, Burundi, said that the use of Latin had led the bishops to ignore the problems of the Word. He suggested that in the next synod there should be an information service for the bishops, to explain to them what was happening in their own synod. Belatedly the meeting had become a scene of direct confrontation and exchanges.

Conceding, in effect, that this synod was at least partially a failure, the bishops urged better working methods next time—in 1977. Documents in modern languages, better simultaneous trans-lations, resort to parliamentary devices such as points of order and broader use of small, working-group sessions were some of

But the Pope had the last word. Addressing the synod, he hailed its achievements, thanked the them bluntly that he was not going to take most of their advice. His task had been assigned by God, the Pope said, and in the church, papal authority was "full supreme and universal" "The content of the faith is either Catholic or it is not," said His Holiness, and therefore it would be "dangerous to speak of diversified theologies according to continents and cultures." Local courches would have to accept Rome's authority and not try to set themselves up as final arbiters. "Human sciencement social progress" were fine in their place, but were 'not to be excessively emphasized."

"We could not allow false dire tions to be followed," insisted the Pope, confirming in the end, as was not only the synod of the

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 28 (Reuters).—Argentina's rightist "Triple A" death squad seems to have turned its attention to cleaning up sexual morals in show business—and world middleweight boxing champion Carlos Monzon is one of its targets,

Mr. Monzon, 32, tops one of two new death lists issued during the weekend by the "Argentina Anti-Communist Alliance." The lists earmarked politicians and show-business personalities for threatened "execution."

One list was sent to the Radical party, the biggest party in the opposition to the Peronist government. Eight party officials, including a senator and three congressional deputies, were warned to leave Argentina in 73 hours or face death.

The other list, received by the Argentine Actors' Association, included three actresses and an actor, five television and film directors, a former television station manager and Mr. Monzon.

Radical party leaders sent a copy of the death list to President Isabel Peron, and the actors' association sent a message to Mrs. Peron expressing concern over the threats. Mrs. Peron met today with leader of nine opposition parties to discuss measures to counter the wave of political killings and assassination threats.

Speculation that the actors' list was a hoex because of the nonpolitical character of five of the persons named was dismissed by the actors' association, which held two urgent weekend meetings to discuss what measures to take.

Some leftist show business per sonalities have already fled after receiving similar threats. The Triple A" death squad has killed at least 25 persons, including the brother of a former president and little-known labor militants, in the last few weeks

The five nonpolitical personal-ities were Mr. Monzon, actresses Susana Gimenez and Isabel Sarli and film directors Armando Bo and Daniel Tinayre.
Miss Gimenez appeared nude

Miss Sarii has become Argentina'e sex symbol. Mr. Bo has directed all ber films. While the actors' association declined to reveal the whereabouts of its threatened members. the police reported that Mr. Monzon had been under arrest in his home town of Santa Fe after allegedly hitting his wife. Beatriz, during a family birthday party on Saturday night.

Complaint Sworn

Police said Mr. Monzon was arrested early yesterday morning after his wife swore out a complaint against him. They said a judge released Mr. Monzon on his own recognizance after he made a statement at police headquarters, and the case is now in the investigative stage.

Today, Mr. Monzon denied he had been arrested.

The six other threatened showbusiness personalities have either directed or acted in controversial socio-political films, or are considered leftist sympathizers.

Rabin's Majority Handed Setback

TEL AVIV. Oct. 28 (UPI).-Premier Yitzhak Rabin's efforts to broaden his one-vote majority government suffered a setback today when a junior coalition party voted to pull out rather than sit in the cabinet with the National Religious party.

Mr. Rabin said yesterday that he intends to bring the Religious party into the government later this week. The NRP holds 10 seats in the 120-member Knesset (parliament). The governing council of the Citizens Rights Movement, with three Knesset deputies, then voted to withdraw from the government "under present conditions." The Movement favors separation of religion and state and territorial concessions to Jordan to gain a Middle East peace. Negotiations between the goveroment and the postal unions were broken off last night, with no new meeting scheduled.

The government, which has set firm limits on wage increases as part of its anti-inflation policy, so far has refused to offer the unions anything close to the 200franc-per-month ($40) increase the 232,000 postal workers are seeking. Any such settlement, officials here believe, would be followed by similar demands from other civil-service employees.

The postel workers, who fre-quently have been at the head of wage battles in the past, are trying to win ar increase over the 1,450-franc-per-month ($290) base starting salary of the 2 million public-sector employees. The leaders in this strike have not been the unions themselves, but the mail sorters, who are asking premiums for what they regard as dehumanising work.

Pierre Lelong, the government under secretary in charg, of the post and telephone service, added to the malaise last week when he branded the sorters' work as "stupid," and charged that too many of them were taking it

So far, the government's main offer has been to reclassify 1,800 temporary mailroom workers as permanent and offer a nightwork premium of 35 centimes (7 the first time we are convinced cents) an hour. The main salary agreement between the government and the civil-service workers was signed last June and called for a 1.65-per-cent annual increase in the real wage, that is, over the inflation rate. This is the first postal strike here since the paralysis of May,

The largest loan was to Robert Anderson, who served as secretary of the Treasury during the Eisenhower administration and was described by Mr. Rockefeller as a long-time friend. According to the three-page list, Mr. Anderson received a $60,000 loan on Jan 2, 1957, and $24,000 on April 1, 1957. Both loans were repaid in full on June 6, 1957, nearly twn months before Mr. Anderson became Tressury secretary.

The next-largest personal loan was $60,000 to Wallace Harrison, who was director of the Office of Inter-American Affairs during the 1940s and "an intimate friend and associate for over 40 years," Mr. Rockefeller said. Mr. Rockefeller said that while some of the persons to whom he lent money held public office, they were private citizens at the time the loans were made. Included among the loans were salary advances to the staff of the Temporary State Commission on the Constitutional Convention during 1958, when New York legislativa funding had

Mr. Wilhelm said that one of the arrested men had set up contacts with an outlawed Croatian exiles organization.

The 'Eagleton Affair' Turns Against Senator's Opponent

By Jules Witcover

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 28 (WP),-A little grayer now, but just as lively as he was in 1972 when he bounced on and uff the Demo-cratic national ticket, Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo, stood happily before a meeting of the party faithful who, the polls say. will give him a landslide vote and a second term on Tuesday of next

Sen. Eagleton was telling them how he and his beagle, Pumpkin, were watching television and heard Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz propose to alleviate the food shortage "by killing off half the cats and dogs in the United

"Well, my dog picked up one of her ears when she heard that," Sen. Eagleton related, "sn I said to her, 'Pumpkin, Butz says yon've got to go'." And then the senator added, as the audience roared and applauded:

"I hope you won't make light of this. I talk to my dog and my dog talks to me. But by all means, never tell George Mc-Govern.

And that is how the "Eagleton affair" is treated now, two years after Sen. McGovern dropped the 44-year-old Missourian as the Democra e vice-presidential can-didate on disclosure of his history of mental illness.

'Sympathy Vote'

Sen. Eagleton's opponent in this year's Senate race, 63-yearold former Rep. Thomas Curtis, learned to his chagrin a few weeks ago that any discussion of the 1972 Eagleton-McGovern episode is playing with dynamite. Mr. Curtis accused Sen. Eagleton of "encouraging a sympathy vote for himself" over the affair and called on him to release his medical records, which Sen. Eng's steadfastly has declined to do on the grounds that his doctors will not permit it.

In a letter to a complaining Eagleton supporter, Mr. Curtis asked: "Is it possible that Mr. Eagleton is conducting a campaign to get people to feel sorry for him because he has problems? And is he so calloused that he and his supporters are falsely spreading the word around that I am calling attention to his mental problems and alleged drinking habits?"

Mr. Curtis wrote that Sen. Eagleton's "mental condition" was "not a major item in the qualifications" to be a senator and beuce he was not raising it in this race. It was important, though, in a national candidate. he said, "where the nation's very life may depend upon the chief executive's calmness—for example, pressing the button which might start an atomic war." Here, Mr. Curtis argued, was where a legitimate issue could be raised against Sen, Eagleton. "Anyone who deliberately fails to inform his own party leaders and seeks to hide this from the public is guilty of a serious breach of responsibility," he wrote.

Letter to Newspapers

Having raised these points, Mr. Curtis said he would not discuss the issue again—and promptly dispatched copies of the letter to St. Louis's two daily newspapers, saying that they had the responsibility to raise the integrity issue in this regard, while he did

A storm of criticism against Mr. Curtis followed. The St. Louis Post-Dispatch called the action "an unwarranted personal attack" on Sen. Esgleton and "shabby" campaigning and Republican papers expressed "disappointment" in Mr. Curtis. At Curtis headquarters, the man who approved the letter and has been directing the challenger's campaign is Lyn Nofziger, former aide to the Republican National Committee and the Nixon administration, and once a political adviser to California's Gov. Ron-

Mr. Nofziger signed up with Mr. Curtis after leaving the campaign of Republican Leo Thorsness, the former Vietnam prisoner of war running against Sen. Mc-Govern in South Dakota, when Sen, McGovern singled him out dirty tricks team."

Sen. Eagleton last week called Mr. Nofziger's presence "an af-front to the kind of clean campaigning which Missourians ex-pect and deserve." He charged that there had been "a marked increase in distortions of my records, misleading statements and a general negative cam-paign since Mr. Nofziger took over in early September.

Aide Defended

Mr. Curtis, however, defended Mr. Noiziger as 'a reputable man' and charged Sen. Eagleton with McCarthylsm. Mr. Nofziger says tha letter was part of an effort to challenge Sen. Eagleton's honesty and integrity in the Eagleton affair" without raising questions about his mental health.

But Mr. Curtis said he does not need to raise this issue anymore because "Engleton has misrepresented the facts on so many other things." He said Sen. Engleton is for gun control, deficit spending and school busing, although the senator says otherwise. In a speech at St. Louis University tha other day, Sen. Eagleton did, indeed, strike a very moderate posture on all these issues. another frustration of the conservative Mr. Curtis, wh is trying to paint the race as a clear-cut

Autocratic Terror

Five bombs went off in New York City on Saturday, early enough so that no one was killed or injured. The Armed Forces of Puerto Rican Liberation claimed responsibil. ity. In Scheveningen, near The Hague, Dutch hostages were seized in a prison incident related to an earlier plane hijacking by two Arabs. There seems to be some association with the Palestine guerrilla

The New York bombings preceded a mass meeting of Puerto Ricans demanding independence for their island. The Scheveningen affair coincided with the gathering, in Rabat, of Arab leaders, and the question of Palestine was the most engrossing aspect of it. There are good reasons to believe that the timing of the bombings was deliberate and that of the seizure of the worshipers in the prison chapel accidental, so far as the official gatherings were concerned. But, in any case, the public debates and the private use of force, in both instances, shed light on one

Puerto Rico has "commonwealth status" within the United States that is to say, a large degree of local autonomy. There is a political party devoted to independence in the island; it has never mustered more than 5 per cent of the vote. The question of Palestine is so complex that the Arab states themselves eannot agree about it. Yet terrorists have no compunction in using force, far from the areas immediately concerned, to assert, as they say, the will of the peoples involved.

One of the speakers at the rally in New. York cited an equation often given about the American Revolution: that one-third of the colonists wanted independence, one-third were indifferent and one-third wanted to remain British. "We shall get it the same way if need be," he boasted. He ignored the overwhelming vote of Puerto Ricans for their present status, and the fact that many would like statehood. But his general assumption: that a minority of activists know what is best for their people and are going to give it to them whether they like it or not is common to many of that breed, including the Irish Republican Army.

The evidence about the wishes of the Puerto Ricans in Puerto Rico is incontestable; that about the Irish, whether in the North or the South, is also expressed at the ballot box. The Palestinians have never been consulted on the same basis. But for all of these there are small groups that claim to represent them with guns and bombs. It is an autocracy of terror, that usually finds greater support outside their movement and outside those who are most directly concerned, and that trades upon a romanticism of revolution to justify destruction and murder. It is, in this tight-knit world, replete with delicate mechanisms for the maintenance of the human community, a dangerous element, both in what it actually achieves in death and disruption and in what it seeks to impose. It is time that the world recognized the common threat, and realized that the mindless gun or bomb is a peril

Ties With East Europe

The pattern of gradual progress in American relations with Communist East Europe stands to be disrupted if a solution is not speedily found to a dispute involving Czechoslovakia. Though Prague is, in Secretary of State Kissinger's words, "last on our list" in East Europe because of the Soviet intervention of 1968, Washington and Prague until recently had been edging back toward normal relations. The Czechs agreed last July to pay some $20 million against the $50 million claimed for American property nationalized after 1945. In return, they were to receive (1) access to credits, (2) an end to tariff discrimination against their goods and (3) some 18 tons of their gold seized by the wartime Allies from Nazi Germany. The Senate Finance Committee, however, then passed a special-interest trade bill amendment requiring Prague first to pay not 40 cents but 100 cents on each dollar of claims. The State Department worries that this demand will jeopardize U.S.-Czech relations. The claimants respond that the Czechs will cough up the extra 60 cents out of concern that otherwise they would be frozen out of the considerable benefits promised them in the trade bill that now seems in prospect.

In the light of past American-Czech relations, the ironies are ample. Immediately after the war, the American government, vigorously representing the interests of nationalized American corporations, pressed their claims (and other political demands) hard. The Czechs balked. Whether a more anderstanding American attitude might have beloed preempt the 1948 Communist coup remains a question that divides American historians. Today, however, some American corporations feel that their government, specifically the State Department, is not representing them vigorously enough; hence the end run to Congress. The State Department's new attitude is that the further satisfaction of these corporate interests should yield to its building of a political edifice in which relations with East Europe proceed steadily and keep up with relations with the Soviet Union. With the accord on Soviet emigration having just freed the trade bill from a two-year political ice jam, the State Department is anxious lest every East-bloc country except Czechoslovakia come in out of the cold.

Trade with Communist countries is often portrayed by its advocates as a medium of peace. This viewpoint fits the U.S. Calvinist heritage and its economic appetite alike. By its students, however, such trade is seencorrectly-as a political as well as an economic activity, one which sometimes enhances direct political ties and sometimes cuts across them. In trade with countries whose economic acts are entirely state-directed, it cannot be otherwise, though Americans, whose own economic acts are at a certain remove from the state, are not accustomed to thinking so. Whether in the Czech case 40 cents on the dollar is a suitable compromise of the corporate claims and national interests involved, we are not prepared to say. The Senate's calendar puts it up to Prague to decide whether to make a new and sweeter offer or to gamble by sticking with its previous one. In any event, we should all understand that, in the dealing with Communist governments, trade and diplo-

U.S.-Soviet Relations

Though he has less of a free hand than in the Nixon days, Henry Kissinger remains an extremely effective negotiator and secretary of state. But the result produced by Ford's firmer line on matters like grain deliveries has started people saying that Kissinger is too soft with the Russians. And certainly those nations negotiating with the Russians have often yielded to the temptation of claiming "concessions" which really consisted of things any normal civilized country would regard as a matter of course. So any easing of emigration restrictions on Soviet Jews must not be confused with genuine liberalization. And in addition, Moscow has still failed to make any substantial contribution to detente. The troop buildup in East Europe remains and new floods of Russian arms are reaching Syria and Egypt. Under these circumstances it would seem worth considering whether the Chinese corner of the famous triangle has not been over-neglected recently. Visdivostok appears a clumsy choice of venue for the next American-Soviet summit.

-From the Neue Zuercher Zeitung (Zurich).

Despite the bland official communiqué it seems that all did not go quite as smoothly as was hoped in the talks between Mr. Kissinger and Mr. Brezhnev. The main reason seems to be that the Russians are infuriated at the publicity given to assurances from Moscow that Russia would allow Jews to emigrate in return for favorable trade treatment from Washington. This is one more example of the need for private and discreet diplomacy. Americans should realize that sometimes a vow of silence is the best way of reaching a desired objective.

WASHINGTON What we are now witnessing in public is a series of events similar to that which launched, in great secrecy, Mr. Kissinger's "grand design" during the Nixon administration At that time there were the secret trips to Paris for the Vietnam peace negotiations, the visits to Peking and the talks with the Russians, all designed to come to a grand climax in time for the 1972 Nixon election and they

The Nixon spectaculars were just in time for the 1972 election. The 1975 spectacular would be just in time for the 25th Party Congress, as important for Breshnev as the 1972 election was for Nixon

The big trade deals to which the series of summits should lead could show his policy of economic coexistence to be justified, in face of domestic critics who hint that he is making hig political concessions for uncertain economic returns. And the Geneva conference will clearly yield a spectacu-lar European summit. This will put the seel of success on Brezhnevs European policy which was designed to legitimise Russia's World War II advance into the middle of Europe

But even these are only small beginnings. The big item on the agenda of the 25th Congress is not just the new five-year plan but an unprecedented 15-year plan. This will provide a specific ent of long-term Soviet ends, a political as well as an commitment and a focus of inner Kremlin struggle.

Since the death of Stalin, each new five-year plan has provoked hidden struggle between hard-liners and moderates. The line of division runs usually between those who want more money for arms and those who sever civilian economy. The fall of Elizabehov was the fit leags port to the busiliness' retunt to accept the five-year plan then under

This means that the main directions of economic policy, of the allocation of resources, and therefore of military policy and strat-egy have to be agreed at least in outline before the 25th Congress. CREENVILLE, S. For what the visitor feels in Greenville is how intensely American it is, with all the changes and the contradictions. And the ideals.

Questions .

Again and again in Greenville. the visitor hears troubled questions: How could we have been so wrong about Nixon? Were our institutions strong, or were we lucky? Can democracy survive the economic and social strains of the kind building up in the world now? Watergate has left its mark But there was something here be-fore, something idealistically American, that helped to shape James Mann.

President Ford came to Greenville the other day on a campaign tour. Only 800 tickets were sold for a $100-a-plate lunch in a hall that could seat 2,000. Probably not too much should be made of that, politically, but there is a sense of disappointment in Ford. A banker, an insurance man, an advertising executive wondered why he did not sak more of the American peopleask what the times demand.

In the end that may be the message of Greenville: just as in the Watergate experience, the people of this country have more courage and more common kense than their leaders appreciate.

Soviet Compromise On Emigration Issue,

By Robert G. Kaiser

WASHINGTON-The intricate deal that the Soviet Union has now struck with Henry Kissinger and Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash, on the question of emigration by its own citizens is surely one of the most significant: developments of the cold war ers. Or it is a trick for which the sians could pay dearly. There seems no resconsble middle position between those two. Either the men in the Kremin have made an extraordinary compromise in pursuit of détente and American economic essistance-or they have allowed Sec. Jackson to trap them in a hard place from which there is not likely to be any comfortable exit. The Russians have put them-selves in this remarkable position. without on the record, at least -doing anything at all. Their presence in the agreement—really exphange of letters between Klamper and Jackson-consists of one oblique reference in the Kissinger letter:

"...on the besis of discussions that have been conducted with Soviet representatives, I. should libs . to inform you that we have been assured . Then Klasinger listed the assurances he

Radical Change

Rissinger could not have used that language if the Soviets had not read and accepted his entire letter. And the contents of the letter describe what should be a radical change in Soviet domestic policy.

Until now, the official Soviet attitude toward Jews who wanted to emigrate has been a complex combination of willingness and bitter opposition. On one hand, more than 90,000 Soviet Jews have been allowed to emigrate, mostly to Israel, since 1968. On the other hand, most of these were elderly or untrained, and most lived in peripheral areas of the Soviet

Men and women in mominent positions, with important jobs or numeral training, have often been denied permission to emigrate. Hundreds of them, perhaps thou-sands, have been fired from their jobs the moment they applied for

The authorities have told mumerous Jews that they cannot emigrate because they held sensitive positions in Soviet society and knew things that might interest foreign enemies. This reason for denying exit views has been given to men who work in Soviet military industry—as well as to a scholar of ancient Chinese philosophy and a movie cameraman. The authorities selfom indicate whether denials on this ground are permanent or tempo-

Jews Harassed

In dozens of well documented cases, the Russians have harasted certain Jews who sought to emigrate. They have arrested Jews, sent their children to the army, trumped up criminal charges against them, denied them means of livelihood and even food to eat. While many left, many others suffered.

Soviet Jews interpreted all this as a policy of selective intimidation intended to discourage the most talented and best placed Jews from trying to emigrate, while Jews from working backgrounds and particularly those from non-productive age brackets have been allowed to leave. For several years, many members of the Jewish intelligentsis defied the implied warning of the official line, and applied to emigrate despite the dangers. During the last year or so, however, fower people from this group have handed in their documents, as the Russians describe applying to leave. The policy of inimidation seems to be working (Also at work, no doubt, were

Woman Who Killed Attacker

Garcia Case Appeal to Argue On Trauma Effects of Rape

By Lacey Fosburgh

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 28 (NYT).—The prison sentence of five years to life imposed last week on Inez Garcia for killing a man she said had helped to rape her will be sppealed in a move that will seek to re-examine attitudes about women, rape and

Charles Garry, attorney for the 30-year-old woman, said that he had filed a notice of appeal in-forming the court that these issues, "only recently being talked about by society in general," would be the basis of his effort to win a new trial.

Mrs. Garcia, convicted of second-degree murder after a mouthlong trial in Monterey, was given the maximum prison sentence, Superior Court Judge Stanley Lawson said: "I think this woman is dangerous, frank-

Booed by Audience When his remarks were greeted with boos from women in the killed one. The prosecution said that there had been no rape, and that the killing stemmed from a fight with the men.

In an interview, Mr. Garry discussed the legal controversy that has developed over the case. He charged that the judge had refused to allow him to explore thoroughly the sociological and psychological question of rape as it affects women in general. He had hoped, he said, to provide the jury with an understanding of Mrs. Garcia's mental state at the time of the killing. He specifically wanted to show that her violent reaction was in some respects typical of the hysteria and trauma that, he said, some studies indicate many women experience after being

His appeal, he said, will assert that the court's understanding of rape should be expanded accept the concept that rape so traumatizes women that violent reactions such as Mrs. Garcia's are understandable and, "in some extenuating circumstances, constitute a legally justifiable homicide. The case has provoked discussion in legal and feminist circles of the question whether such trauma does justify violence or homicide

Lost Flavor

Though their flavor is aggres-sive, chilies lose it very quickly; as the whole point of using them at all is to profit by their pungency, you had better protect it by keeping chiles—and not too long even at that—in a cold dry place, like a refrigerator (in a tightly closed vessel unless you want everything else in it to taste like chili too, especially if it is a case of fresh ones, but this goes for dried chilies also). If you want to reduce the heat of fresh chilies, sock them in salted cold water for an hour or two before using them.

Various lan-guages have helped to comuse the already hewildering multiplicity of Capsicum (a Latin word meaning Capsicini (a latar word meaning "little box," an admirable description of the shape of his pod-like to casket life vegetable). During the 17th century, chilireft the word from the spice, piment for the chili and use poiwon for the vegetable papper, but not all French speakers are purists. Indeed, when the average Prenchman wants to designate a hot chili unmistarably, he nate a hot chili unmistakably, he calls it pili-pili, a word known to all Prenchmen but to no French dictionaries. It must have drifted into France from its former African colonies, and the same thing probably happened in Spain, which says pil-pil in addition to the academic pimiento, also called Brazilian pepper. Madagascar dif-fers from tropical Africa by say-ing sakaipilo instead of pili-pili.

Long Cultivated

In Brazil and Peru, South American Indians began eating wild chilies somewhere between 6,500 and 5,000 BC. The first conquistadores found chilies still growing wild there, but by then they had long been cultivated and had become the principal season-ing first of the Incas and then of the Aztecs. Tenochtitlan, now Mexico City, received chilles, among other foods, as tribute from conquered peoples. From Mexico the chill pushed as far north as what is today the Southwestern United States, where it was adopted enthudastically by the Pueblo Indians, one of whose favorite dishes today is still green chili stew served with adobe bread and a salad of marinated cocumbers the last not available in Valerius Cordus sent baca the earliest of these reports, but curiously enough it was a German botanist, Leonhart Fuchs, who led in calling special atten-tion to what he called Calcutts pepper, in the belief that Columbus had reached Asia. As a matter of fact, Capsicum had not yet reached India in Fuchs's time; it was not planted there, by the Portuguese, until 1611, 45 years. after the German botanist's death. He probably saw it in Spain, where it had been introduced in

Most American foods took two or times centuries to captivate Europeans, but Capsicum, -- once transplanted elsewhere, won speedy acceptance, and by the end of the 16th century was being grown widely in India, Africa and, where the climate permitted

Though chilles, either fresh or dried, can be used alone or in combination with others as vegetables, or in salads, their principal use is as seasoners: indeed those who are acquainted with chili only in powdered form may be excused if they think it bus no other function than to serve as a spice. Usually what is for on the market as chili powder is not chili alone, but a mixture of powdered dried chilles, cumin, oregano and garlic, or similar combinations. Chili sauce is ordinarily compounded of chiller tomatoes and spices. Chili vinegar defines itself.

"Chili" also means: (1) moderate reddish orange that is yellower and duller than flamingo and duller and very slightly yellower than crab apple;" and (2)a hot dry wind which in Tunisia blows from the south—that is, from the Sahara, chill territory

LONDON OPERA: 'Otello' and Central European Sins

By Henry Pleasants

LONDON, Oct. 28 (IHT) -A Herbert von Karajan film production of Verdi's "Otello" was given a world premiere at Royal Festival Hall Friday night and is now running at the ABC Bloomsbury Cinema, Karajan, as everyone knows, is not one for spend-

The musical performance is uniformly admirable. What is wrong is the film-

All the familiar sins of Central European opers film production over the past decade, including several operas in which Karajan has had a hand, are vividly on display: restless camera work, forever distracting attention from the singer and what is being sing; restlessness imposed upon the principals; so that they are forever under way from one place to another; relentless close-ups robbing the spectacle of space and perspective; over-simplification and disregard of distance in gauging amplification and, most disturbing of all, synchronization that makes it all too obvious that what we see and what we hear are two separate matters. It does seem odd that while BBC-TV—and ITV, too, with their filming of Glyndebourne's "The Marriage of Figaro"—has

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Motorola to Buy Hunt Chemical Motorola and Philip A. Hunt Chemical Corp. have agreed in principle for Motorola to acquire

Hunt for stock valued at about $130 million. Hunt Chemical is a leading independent manufacturer of platemaking and photographic chemicals. Motorola, a manufacturer of electronic equipment and components, will exchange 0.535 share of its common stock for each of 5,650,681 common shares of Hunt Chemical outstanding. A definitive agreement remains to be negotiated for submission to the boards of both companies and stockholders of Hunt Chemical for approval. While the precise form of the transaction has not been determined, it is expected to be structured as a tax-free reorganization on a pooling-of-interest basis. The diversification move by Motorola closely follows its decision to divest itself of its faltering television business. That was sold earlier this year to Matsushita Electric Industrial Co., a Japanese manufacturer, for what industry sources estimated at a price of slightly under $108 million. The sale probably made the acquisition of Hunt possible, analysts

Temporary Shutdowns Seen at Ford Ford Motor is expected to institute some new temporary plant closings next month to help hold down its relatively high U.S. inventories of unsold small cars. Meanwhile, starting this week, 950 hourly workers in six locations will be laid off indefinitely. Ford is expected to resume its pattern of temporary plant closedowns early next month as its supplies of Pintos are still large enough to last 78 days at current low selling rates and its stock of small Mustang II sporty cars has crept up to the equivalent of 75 days. sales. Ford's overall inventory stands at a more manageable 54 days. Sources expect the company to close its New Jersey plant for at least a week next month, temporarily idling some 3,400 workers, and it may be forced to cut production at its hig Dearborn assembly plant, which employs almost 5,000 workers. Meanwhile, its U.K. affilrate bopes to formally sign agreements this week on the two-year, $68-million wage contract negotated earlier this month. The agreement calls for average wage increases of about 36.5 per cent in the first year of the agreement and 41.4 per cent over the entire two-year period.

VW Offers New Inducement to Quit Volkswagenwerke is offering another 6,000 employees lump-sum payments to persuade them to quit their jobs. Those cancelling their contracts voluntarily will receive between 5,000 and 9,000 deutsche marks each. The offer is especially directed at piece-rate and white-collar workers. Nearly 11,000 workers have left VW this year, including 3,481 who accepted fis first special bonns scheme this summer. The company says its new offer is necessary to reduce its 116,500 work force at a time of slackening sales at home

Swiss Retailer's Bond Irks Government

By Victor Lusinchi

ZURICH, Oct. 28 (NYT).— Karl Schweri, a slight man whose graying hair alone betrays his 57 years, sees himself as a modern William Tell who is using the chain of Denner discount stores he owns as a crossbow in a fight to right the injustices suffered by the humble.

For most of the Swiss business and financial community he is an astute merchandiser who, as one banker says, "enjoys being a maverick."

A firm believer in the saying that the "bigger they are the harder they fall," Mr. Schweri has just gone down to the mat and apparently come up the winner-in a battle with the Finance Ministry and the Swiss National Bank.

The latest encounter with the government was brought on by Mr. Schweri's offering to the customers of his 118 stores (selling some 1,000 nonperishable food and other household items) an opportunity to put their savings in 100-franc (about $34) certificate-of-deposit type bonds bearing 10-per-cent interest.

For every purchase of at least 25 francs worth of goods, the customer was to get a coupon entitling him to purchase a 12-to-18-month bond by paying 100 francs.

"injustice" done the small wage earner by offering him an in-terest rate approaching that obtainable only by the wealthy because of the bir amounts they have to invest.

Whatever the motives, his certificates "cut right across the bow" of the Swiss National Bank's interest and tight-credit policies, a private banker said. Contend-ing that the certificates were actually a bond issue that required its authority to be leunched, the

Analysts added there appeared to be little news behind the late recovery though they noted that banks continued to cut their prime rate, some to 11 1/4 per cent and others to 11 per cent.

In auto stocks, Ford fell 7.8

to 29 1.4 Chrysler was 9 3 4, off 1 2, and General Motors 31 7. 6, off 1 1. 4. Benguet Consolidated "B" was active and closed at 3 1.4 unchanged. A block of 125,000 shares of the issue traded at 3.

Murphy Oil slumped 1 7.8 to 19 7.8. With many oil companies reporting sharply higher earnings. Murphy said third-quarter net fell to 96 cents a share from

$1.30 a year earlier. Gold mining stocks were activa and strong with bullion prices rising abroad. ASA advanced 5 3 8 to 88 1 8, Campbell Red-lake was 39 1/8, ahead 1 7/8, Dome Mines 57, up 4 1.2, and Homestake Mining 49 7/8, ahead

Sugar stocks were sharply higher as sugar prices continued to rise. Holly gained 3 to 35 1/4, Amstar was 32 5/8, up 1 1/2, and Sucrest 11 3'8 shead 3 3'8.

Burlington Industries advanced 3.4 to 16 1.2. The company said a unit was discontinuing a line of pantyhose it had been test marketing.

The American Stock Exchange index closed up 0.06 to 67.42.
The most active issue was Houston Oil & Minerals, closing at 27 1/4, up 3 1/4, on a volume of 154,100 shares. On the over the counter market the NASDAQ industrial average fell 0.10 to 61.04.

In Chicago most farm com-modity futures fell sharply on the Board of Trade but corn futures survived the selling pressure. Soybeans fell the allowable limit of 30 cents a bushel and soybean oil closed down the limit of 150 points. Trading limits in the evo commodities were expanded by 50 per cent for three days, starting today, after both had closed the limit losses for three days. Soybean meal prices at the close were irregular.

Wheat futures were down about 18 cents and oats were irregular, but corn was up 3 cents a bushel.

Price of Gold Rises

To Five-Month High LONDON, Oct. 28 (AP-DJ). — Gold's price varged to a new five-month high today helped by purchases from smaller investors Loadon's five major bullion dealers posted their common gold price at $167.50 an ounce this afternoon, up $2.50 from the morning and up $4.25 from Fri-

One of the dealers said volume was lower than it was on Friday and there were a large number of smaller investors were buying.

provement in the situation" after

Mr. Whitlam made his assessment during a television interview in Sydney, where he and key members of his cabinet have been conferring on the economic situa-tion with leaders of the Austration with leaders of the austra-lian Conneil of Trade Unions. Inflation is running at a rate of about 22 per cent and unem-ployment, which has topped 100,000, is expected to affect more than 3 per cent of the labor force early next year.

Mr. Whitlam's popularity with Australia's voters has fallen from 50 to 25 per cent since ast May's general election, according to the

It doesn't take much to tempt Archer Watson, resident burn at a New Orleans tennis club. So it's no surprise that he is soon involved in a case of statutory rape with one of his more provocative pupils. The tennis pro's predicament is the spring-board for a well-paced comedy that introduces Olin McKeene, an industrial vulture. who wants to turn the Gulf Coast into the Ruhr Valley. What has this grand design got to do with the plight of a lowly sex offender? Lots. Mr. Snelling weaves a tangled web indeed, in which impossible situations are spliced together, with sharp caricatures and funny dialogue. He has perfect pitch for the sounds of "the Big Easy," also known as New Orleans.

"We were bankers," muses the narrator of Morris West's latest. "We washed money clean as cheesecloth; but we ourselves could never quite escape the taint that attached to it." So much for morality and conscience, of which the characters have oc-casional, but not crippling, attacks. And on with the murder, mayhem and chicanery, which Mr. West views with alarm and

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 28 (UPI).
—Slugger Jeff Burroughs, base-stealing king Lou Brock, relief ace Mike Marshall and 25-game winner · Jim (Catfish) Hunter have been named the major league players of the year by the Sporting News.

Burroughs, once described by Ted Williams as "the best hitting prospect I've seen at his age," raised his average 22 points to .301 and increased his runs-batted-in production from 85 to 11g in the 1974 season.

Brock stole 118 bases, a major league record. Marshall appeared in 13 straight games in one stretch and finished with 106 appearances, 15 victories and 21 saves. Hunter has not won fewer goels by Derek Sanderson and than 20 games in a season since Bobby Rousseau led the Rangers he recorded an 18-14 mark in than 20 games in a season since

DAR ES SALAAM, Oct. 28 (AP).-The goalkeeper of the Tanzanian Simba soccer club ciaims he was menaced by knife-wielding fans at a recent soccer match against an Egyptian team—Ghazil Mehalla near Cairo.

Goalkeeper Athumani Mambosasa said the incident occurred during the semi-final round of the Africa Cup of Club Champions in which Simba lost to Ghazil Mehalla.

The government-owned newspaper, Daily News, reported that Mambosasa was so shaken by the sight of Egyptian spectators behind the goal making throwing motions with their knives that he returned home after the match, passing up the club's tour of Sudan.

Chairman of the Tanzanian Football Association Saidi El Maamry told the Daily News the association intends to appeal to the African Pootball Association about the incident.

Dahlia Runs to Record in Canada victory on this continent in pur-England, Ireland, France, By Michael Strauss

ETOBICOKE, Ontario, Oct. 28 (NYT).—Dahlia, the thorough-bred queen from France, yesterday continued to perform majestically. With a late rush, the 4-year-old daughter of Vaguely Noble captured the $152,750 Canadian International championship stakes in the record time of 2 minutes 40 seconds for the 1 5/8th-mile race at the Woodbine track

The victory was scored by a length over Elmendorf's Big Spruce, but the margin was not a true gauge of the filly's superiority over her eight rivals. She led by more than two lengths in the closing phases of the stretch rım as Lester Piggott, her jockey from England, did nothing more than hand ride her.

"Even when we were in traffic on the backside, apparently hemmed on the rail by two horses, I felt I had no cause for concern," said the international riding star after the turi race was over. "I knew Dahlis had lots to give, and I knew some of those horses up front were going to break up as we entered the straight. A crowd of 25,836 watching the proceedings under clear skies, sent Dahlia off as the $2.90-for $2 choice. And when the filly crossed the finish line a winner, having beaten a field that included seven male opponents, they gave her a rousing reception.

As a result of yesterday's triumph, Dahlia, who already had earned $1 million, added $91,650 to her bankroll. She now has amassed $1,206,705, and seems likely to become richer. Her next start will be the Washington, D.C., International, a $150,000 race which she won last year. In scoring her second straight

Injured Back Can't Halt Allison From Winning

RIVERSIDE, Calif., Oct. 28 (AP).—Bobby Allison, heavily bandaged to protect a day-old back injury, yesterday captured the third heat of the interna-tional Race of Champions series as Bobby Unser finished second.

Third place went to two-time Formula One world driving champion Emerson Fittipaldi, who had won Seturday's wreckmarred second stage of the fourrace series. Fittipaldi who started last in the field, still has the overall lead in the series.

Allison, 36, was in the middle of a multi-car pileup in Saturday's race and sustained a hairline fracture of an upper vertebrae and a broken rib.

Doctors patched him up with bandages and a brace so that he could drive in the third race. He started in the pole position beside Unser, trailed the 1974 United States Auto Club champion for two lans, then took over and led the rest of the way in the 30lap, 76-mile race.

"I considered not running," Allison said later, "but I knew I wouldn't hurt myself further unless I crashed again."

"It was harder climbing the stairs up here to meet you people than it was driving the race car." Allison said to newsmen in Riverside International Raceway's upper level press box. "I apparently had the best car in the field," he said. Indeed, he dld as he won by 3.1 seconds, averaging 99.114 miles an hour. It was the same car Unser drove to victory in the first race at Michigan International Speedway last mouth, and the same one Fittipaldi drove Saturday. All drivers compete in this series in

"I hear he makee more than a quarter is million dollars a year," said Seaver, who makes $170,000 from the Mets plus son significant side money, and he was nearly right. Oh earns $180,000 from the Giants, gets almost as much from endorsements, plus a free car, maid service and enough frings benefits to spin Marvin Miller's head.

"I saw Henry Aaron play at Vero Beach six years ago," Oh said through an interpreter, warming up for his home run con-test here next Saturday against the man who broke Babe Ruth's record. "I didn't get the impression that he was a home run hitter. Why? Because Aaron wasn't known in Japan six years ago as a home run hitter esides, he didn't get any home rims that day."

"I'm a fast ball hitter," Oh confessed to Seaver, who thought that over for a moment and replied: "In that case, I'll throw changeups and curves. Maybe one fast ball to see what harnens"

Then the great confrontation took place after the Mets had rushed into a 3-0 lead off Shitcahi Sekimoto, a 23-year-old rightbander who was the first of six pitchers Japan threw at Yogi Berra's people. Seaver, who won 11 games and lost 11 with a sore hip last summer hadn't nitched in 26 days but he wiped out the side in the first inning and then faced Oh leading off the second. The catcher, Bon Hodges, signaled for a curve wall.

"I shook him off," Tom Terrific reported with a sense of history. "I didn't want to try to trick Sadaharu Oh. I wanted to throw him the fast ball to see what would

What happened was that Oh grounded out to first base on Seaver's 3-and-2 pitch. But in the third inning, he faced Seaver with the bases loaded and lined a single to right-field for two runs.

In the fourth inning, the Giants tied the score but in the fifth Garrett reached the right-field seats and in the sixth Dave Schneck reached them for three more runs and a 7-8 lead. Then Japan had its inning: o Nagashima, who is almost as revered as Oh singled bome one run in the sixth: two more crossed in the seventh, and finally two singles and a perfect bunt loaded the es with nobody out in the eighth, Pitching for New York, Jerry Cram; batting for Tekyo, Oh.

In Japan, inflation has pushed the price of a cocktail to $4 and a steak dinner to $40, and there is nothing cheap about a home run by Sadaharu Oh, even though the foul lines are only 290 feet to the fence. On the first pitch from Cram, the Japanese Babe Ruth drilled a hanging curve into the right-field seats for four runs, and the Mets had a losing streak in the Orient.

New York's Service Station for Immortals

By N.R. Kleinfield

NEW YORK (AP-DJ).—Civic Pride, a lady of some distinction who teeters aton the Municipal Building here, suffers from a sagging bosom and pitted arms. She has a hole in her head. This is the worst shape she's been in since 1935, the year her right arm toppled off, tumbled 100 feet and shattered the skylight of a

Her advanced state of decrepitude is shared to varying degrees by most other monuments in New York, where abrasive air pollution and fickle weather pay no heed to glory. Hence, chins sag. Noses droop. Ears dissolve. From time to time, statues lose their heads.

Worse still for reasons sociologists can best explain, many New Yorkers take giee in writing on, smashing, toppling, sawing, painting, shooting, stoning, stealing and otherwise defacing monuments. Due to the combined forces of theft and general wear, monuments are steadily vanishing from the city. In 1971, an especially bad

Seven Men

Steving off this alarming rate of stirition is the almost hopeless task of seven men who toil in the dingy basement of a recreation center on Manhattan's Upper West Side. They preside over the country's only municipal monument repair shop, a sort of service station for the immortal.

"It's a tremendous problem, because people don't show the respect for monu-ments they used to," says Joseph Bresnan, pale-complexioned, affable mar of 31 who is the city's monuments officer. "They don't understand what the monuments mean, so they go and wipe them out. And they're careless. You wouldn't believe how many people drive their ears into monu-

Some 1,100 statues, tablets, plaques, columns and executae fall under Mr. Bresnan's jurisdiction—more than are found in any other city. (This is a record number even for New York, because the city gains statues faster than it loses them.) The monuments are as small as the two-inch comemorative plaques scattered around the city. They are as large as the 75foot-tall Soldiers and Sellors Arch in Brooklyn's Grand Army Plaza. (The Statue of Liberty, the largest monument in New York, is a federal statue cared for by the National Park Service.) They are as ancient as the Egyptian obelisk in Central Park which approaches 3,000 years in age. And they are as redundant as the dozen memorials to George Washington, the most Honized man in New York. Columbus trails with five monuments, and Thomas Jefferson has merited four.

The monuments division sprang from the Artists Project of the Works Progress Administration during the Depression. In 1934, 43 unemployed artists were assigned to care for city memorials. Ever since the project was disbanded in 1939, the city administration has kept a small staff of artisans on the payroll, currently paying each $10,500 a year. (Other cities farm out monument repair work to contractors; New York uses them only for particularly large

Graffiti

Half the division's time is spent scrub-ing away obscene graffiti, which reappears virtually as soon as it is erased. At some favorite haunts for graffiti artists, such as the Washington Arch in Greenwich Village's Washington Square, Mr. Breman the monuments sparkling.

Washing statues with a water wagon, polishing them with lemon oil and steel wool and general repair work-often with the aid of a foundry—occupy the remainder of the division's time. In a good year, only 150 monuments get touch-ups from the crew. "We're so behind that I can't even see all the monuments every year, Mr. Bresnan says. "Once I get around to seeing some of them, they're gone."

In any given year, a dozen or so monuments vanish altogether. Bronze plaques are especially vulnerable; thieves can get 35 cents a pound for scrap bronze. Also popular are portable statue accessories: Five or six generals are missing swords. A musket is gone, as are a helmet, a slew of bayonet blades, a horse's bridle, 15 turtles, a set of sours and the falcon that once adorned a Central Park statue of a falconer. A decade ago, someone rudely swiped the fig leaf from the Randal's Island discus thrower. "I feel for the guy," Mr. Bres-nan says, "but we just haven't gotten around to replacing the leaf."

The heist that set all-time city records occurred in the late 1950s at the corner of Riverside Drive and West 72nd Street. This corner was the site of an ornate, bronze lamp post honoring Henry Hudson. It was 30 feet high and weighed about a ton and a half. One day, a car simmed into the post at a high speed and knocked it over. And before it could be repaired, someone rea off with it. "It would have taken someone like Hercules and Atlas to pull the job," Mr. Bresnan says. He adds wearily: "Next, someone will swipe the

The division's slim $100,000 annual budget has considerably hampered efficiency, because even a routine restoration costs several thousand dollars. Replacing a sword costs about $1,500, for it requires ng a scaffold and takes several men a full day. Some 60 monuments are presently languishing in the shop awaiting repair. Because of the backlog none are expected to leave for several years, if ever-

Certain irregularities in the monuments are beyond even the scope of the repair crew. Though William Seward, secretary of state from 1861 to 1869, was diminutive in real life, a statue in Madison Square Park portrays him as a six-footer. The statue, it turns out, was originally intend-ed to be of Abraham Lincoln. When the Lincoln contract was cancelled at the last minute, the scriptor recourcefully welder a new head Seward's onto Lincolu's gangly frame.

Similarly, a statue of Justice stop City Hall is throught to be the only rendition in the country that isn't blindfolded. No one knows why. And Frederick Mac-Monies, who sculpted a group of Civil War soldiers onto Memorial Arch in Brooklyn's Grand Army Plaza, couldn't resist drafting himself and a few friends into the regiment. "It was a while before someone noticed," Mr. Bresnan says. "After all, only about two people could recognize

Though he admittedly sees them at their worst. Mr. Bresnan has an abiding fondness for the monuments in his charge. "If nobody cared about these sort of things, I don't know where we'd be," he says, "The monuments tell us about yesterday. They bring home what is otherwise a very abstract thing . . . Someone can look at a movement and maybe just maybe for a moment remember the way it was back
